28.11.2021

To conduct the proportional elections of 54 deputies of the Jogorku Kenesh, nominated by political parties on the candidate lists, the entire territory of the Kyrgyz Republic shall be considered as a single constituency.

At the same time, voters residing outside the territory of the Kyrgyz Republic are considered as assigned to a single electoral district.

For a comprehensive discussion of determining single-mandate constituencies, an Interdepartmental Working Group on the formation of single-mandate constituencies was formed, which has become a platform for discussing possible options.

Heads of regional and district government institutions took part in the discussions.

According to the legislation, electoral districts shall be formed in accordance with the following requirements:

approximate equality of electoral districts in the number of voters, with allowed deviation from the average rate of voter representation, as a rule, by no more than 20 percent;

a constituency makes up a single territory, formation of constituencies from the territories not adjacent to each other is not allowed;

when complying with these requirements, as a rule, the administrative-territorial division of the republic is taken into account.

For the formation of single-mandate constituencies, the CEC rested on the data submitted by authorized state bodies in charge of population registration, land management bodies, and local self-government bodies, in accordance with the requirements of the legislation.

Each constituency is formed with the approximate number of 100,476 voters +/- 20%.
